On July 28, 2009, a man walked up to the counter of a branch of KeyBank in Seattle, pushed a black bag across the counter, and ordered the teller to hand over money. Jim Nicholson (Nicholson), the 30-year-old bank teller who had worked for the bank for more than two years, stood up to the man and demanded to see the weapon. On July 30, 2009, an employee of KeyBank found himself fired from his job two days after he had prevented an attempted
